DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 2. Claims 1-4 and 11-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Do et al. (US 6372330).

Do et al. disclose a magnetic recording medium having a non-magnetic substrate, an underlayer, a first magnetic layer, a non-magnetic spacer layer, a second magnetic layer, and another spacer layer thereon. Additional antiferromagnetically coupled magnetic layers are deposited thereon and an overcoat is deposited on top of these layers (see Fig. 6). The reference teaches that the non-magnetic spacer layers can be formed from any one of Ru, Cr, Rh, Ir, and Cu (col. 3, lines 57-66). An example is described wherein both spacer layers are formed from Ru (col. 8, lines 18-36). The reference fails to explicitly disclose an embodiment having a first non-magnetic spacer formed from Ru and a second spacer formed from Cr.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to substitute a Cr spacer layer for the spacer layer 36' shown in Fig. 6 in view of the reference's teaching of the functional equivalence of Ru and Cr.

3. Claims 5 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Do et al. (US 6372330) in view of Shimizu et al. (US 2002/0127433).

Do et al. teach all of the limitations of the claims, as detailed above, except for the presence of a lubrication layer on top of the protective overcoat.

Shimizu et al. teaches a magnetic recording medium having an antiferromagnetically coupled structure with an overcoat layer and a lubricant layer thereon. The reference teaches that the lubricant layer provides lubrication between the disk surface and the magnetic head (paragraphs [0045], [0076]-[0077]).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to add a lubrication layer on top of the overcoat taught by Do et al. in order to enhance lubrication between the recording medium surface and the magnetic head.

4. Claims 6-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Do et al. (US 6372330) in view of Bian et al. (US 6572989).

Do et al. disclose a magnetic recording medium having a non-magnetic substrate, an underlayer, a first magnetic layer, a non-magnetic spacer layer, a second magnetic layer, and another spacer layer thereon. Additional antiferromagnetically coupled magnetic layers are deposited thereon and an overcoat is deposited on top of these layers (see Fig. 6). The reference teaches that the non-magnetic spacer layers can be formed from any one of Ru, Cr, Rh, Ir, and Cu (col. 3, lines 57-66). An example is described wherein both spacer layers are formed from Ru (col. 8, lines 18-36). The reference fails to explicitly disclose an embodiment having a first non-magnetic spacer formed from Ru and a second spacer formed from Cr.

Art Unit: 1773

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to substitute a Cr spacer layer for the spacer layer 36' shown in Fig. 6 in view of the reference's teaching of the functional equivalence of Ru and Cr.

The reference is also silent with respect to the specific elements of the magnetic recording apparatus for use therewith.

Bian et al. teaches a conventional disk drive structure which includes a recording medium, a plurality of actuator arms, a spindle and spindle motor, magnetic head, and a voice control motor (col. 5, lines 24-62).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to use a conventional recording head assembly such as the one taught by Bian et al. in combination with the recording medium taught by Do et al. in order to form a functional disk drive.

5. Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Do et al. (US 6372330) in view of Bian et al. (US 6572989) and further in view of Shimizu et al. (US 2002/0127433).

Do et al. in view of Bian et al. teach all of the limitations of the claim, as detailed above, except for the presence of a lubrication layer on top of the protective overcoat.

Shimizu et al. teaches a magnetic recording medium having an antiferromagnetically coupled structure with an overcoat layer and a lubricant layer thereon. The reference teaches that the lubricant layer provides lubrication between the disk surface and the magnetic head (paragraphs [0045], [0076]-[0077]).

Art Unit: 1773

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to add a lubrication layer on top of the overcoat taught by Do et al. in order to enhance lubrication between the recording medium surface and the magnetic head.
